Kiel (Naval Port). Kiel is one of the oldest towns in Holstein being founded by Count Adolf of Schauenburg during the 13th century. It is situated at the south end of the Kieler Fohrde, one of the best havens in Europe, and, thanks to this, it is the chief war-harbour in Germany and the headquarters of the German fleet. The town contains about 165 000 inhabitants, and owns a naval academy and a university, the latter founded in 1665.
